DUTCH RABBIT

Oryctolagus coniculus

ORIGIN: Dutch rabbits were first bred in England. Your rabbit was born in captivity in the USA. Dutch rabbits are a medium breed available in nine color varieties. Rabbits make great pets because of their curiosity, sociability and they rarely bite unless provoked. Most rabbits can be taught to jump over little hurdles or stand up on command with a little training.

LIFESPAN: 7-8 years

GESTATION: 31-33 days. It is recommended that spay/neutering your rabbit will calm their overall behavior.

SIZE: Dutch rabbits are a very hardy, moderately sized breed that will reach 4-7 pounds. They are compact, stocky, and well-rounded in appearance.

CAGING: Dutch rabbits will thrive in a variety of commercially available cages with the following basic requirements: solid flooring (not wire), secure lid, protection from heat, cold, and drafts, and hiding area. A cage with 2 square feet of floor space is large enough for one Dutch rabbit. For each additional rabbit that is kept, the cage should be 1 square foot larger. Most rabbits may be successfully kept outdoors provided they have protection from extreme temperatures and are acclimated.

SUBSTRATE: Dutch rabbits can be successfully kept on a variety of substrates including pine shavings, pelleted and processed bedding. Most rabbits can be successfully litter trained by putting the litter box in the same corner your rabbit has already soiled in.

TEMPERATURE: Dutch rabbits prefer temperatures between 47°F and 64°F. However, they will tolerate temperatures up to 84°F before there is a risk for heat exhaustion. The cage should be placed in a location that is free from drafts and direct sunlight.

DIET: Dutch rabbits will thrive on a variety of available pelleted foods which should form the foundation of their diet in addition to a constant supply of timothy hay. The diet can be also be supplemented with fresh fruits and vegetables, especially dark leafy greens. A mineral block should also be hung in the rabbit's cage. Some of a rabbits favorite treats are: parsley, carrots with tops, a slice of any fruit. Do not give your rabbit these items because they can cause gas: cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower or any lettuce. Young rabbits have a very sensitive stomach; therefore a strict diet must be followed. Upset in their diet can cause dehydration from excessive diarrhea. It is important that chew items are available so that the teeth are kept worn down. Dutch rabbits must have access to fresh, clean drinking water at all times. A sipper bottle is preferable to a water bowl because it is typically cleaner and easier to maintain.
